NAZIS DEMAND F.D. RESIGN

BERLIN, April 29 (AP)—Germany, through her closely-controlled press, strongly assailed President Roosevelt today, underscored demands for Danzig and colonies and differed on how far Chancellor Hitler had closed the door to peaceful negotiation.

One newspaper, the influential Boersenzeitung of Berlin, suggested that Mr. Roosevelt resign because of the "great number of historical untruths, political mistakes and plain absurdities" that Hitler "proved" yesterday existed in the President's peace proposals, to which the Fuehrer replied before the Reichstag.

In his speech rejecting Roosevelt's request for German-Italian non-aggression pledges, Hitler scrapped his 1935 naval agreement with Great Britain and his 1934 ten-year-old non-aggression pact with Poland.

Even well-instructed Nazi commentators differed on the breadth of the chancellor's answer to Mr. Roosevelt's appeal of April 15, but all agreed it was at least a sharp rebuff, and some called it a "political execution" for Roosevelt.

SETTLES DANZIG'S FATE

The reaction in the free city of Danzig was immediate to Hitler's reference to that former German Baltic city as an open question which sooner or later "naturally had to be solved" and his statement that:

"It should be beyond all doubt that Danzig will never become Polish."

Nazis in Danzig, which since the World War has been connected with the Polish customs administration, began to speculate on the day of their "return to the Reich."

Dienst Aus Deutschland, an authoritative commentary service primarily for foreign circulation, emphasized colonies and Danzig as important elements of the address.

Discussing the "extreme irony" in the speech, the service said:

"One could scarcely blame the German people if it only viewed the American proposals ironically, the more so if a statesman who has succeeded in mastering the most difficult economic and social problems speaks for Germany . . ."

Several newspapers with foreign circulations also expressed the opinion that the door was not shut to further negotiations, but in the main the newspapers of primarily

HUNGARY NEXT AIM OF HITLER

BERLIN, April 29 (INS)—Quickly following up his Reichstag speech with political action to cement Germany's friendships, Chancellor Adolf Hitler concentrated today on securing Hungary in the spreading German orbit.

The Fuehrer, who yesterday turned down President Roosevelt's peace proposals and denounced the Anglo-German naval and German-Polish non-aggression agreements, moved swiftly to form a "ring of political friendship" around the Reich in opposition to what he regards as Anglo-French efforts to encircle Germany with potential foes.

Hitler prepared to receive Hungary's two chief diplomats, Premier Count Paul Teleki and Foreign Minister Count Stephen Csaky, who are arriving for a visit of several days.

During their stay in Germany, Teleki and Csaky will engage in important talks with German authorities designed to cement even tighter bonds between Hungary and the Nazi Reich.

It was believed that Hungary-Polish relations also will be discussed.

37 U. S. Warships Sail Up Hudson

NEW YORK, April 29 (AP)—Thirty-seven vessels of the Atlantic squadron moved up the Hudson today in an impressive spectacle of naval might.

While hundreds of spectators watched, battleships, light cruisers, destroyers, submarines, an aircraft carrier and auxiliary ships proceeded toward their berths as part of ceremonies attendant upon the opening of the New York World's Fair tomorrow.

De Valera Warns Britain Of 'Conscription Revolt'

LONDON, April 29—An Irish outcry against the conscription of Irish living in England created a delicate situation today. Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain was in receipt of a message warning the government against trying to conscript Irishmen for the British army.

In the message, Prime Minister Eamon de Valera of Eire served notice that application of conscription to the Eire-sympathizing minorities of Northern Ireland might result in a revolt.

De Valera also protested against possible drafting of Irishmen who live and work temporarily in England, Scotland or Wales.

The communication was delivered to Chamberlain's residence by John W. Dulanty, high commissioner for Eire permanently stationed in London.

Anti-Irish hostility, aroused in England over bombings attributed to the illegal Irish Republican Army, was reversed after Chamberlain's conscription announcement on Wednesday, because of reports that Irish living in England will be forced into military service along with Englishmen.

This decision was expected by some to be announced when the military training bill is introduced in Commons Monday.

F. D. 'CHAT' MAY ANSWER HITLER

WASHINGTON, April 29 (AP)—President Roosevelt may reply to Adolf Hitler in a "fireside chat" over the radio, it was said in usually informed congressional circles today.

Responding yesterday to Roosevelt's recent plea that Germany and Italy promise not to invade or attack 31 independent nations for at least 10 years, the German chancellor offered peace pledges to these states — provided they asked for them and accompanied their requests with proposals he considered suitable.

White House aides said the speech Roosevelt would deliver Sunday afternoon, opening the New York World's Fair, was written before Hitler began his address.

Someone thought he heard the Chief Executive mention the Chancellor, and say "the door was left open an inch," while talking with royal visitors at Hyde Park, N. Y., but there was no clarification of the meaning of this reported remark.

Duce Calls More Troops, Enlarges Vast Armaments

ROME, April 29 (AP)—Premier Mussolini informed his cabinet today the Italian army would be strengthened "in size and equipment."

Il Duce gave his ministers a detailed report on the conference he had two days ago with the minister of finance, Paolo Thaon Di Revel, Jr., and the chief of the general staff of the army, Gen. Guiseppe Pariana, at Mussolini's country retreat at Rocca Delle Carminate.

Plans were drawn at the conference for increasing the nation's military power.

A communique after today's cabinet meeting said:

"The new appropriations allocated to the Army are designed to increase still further its efficiency, both from the point of view of effectives and from the point of view of equipment and territorial defensive organization."

Italy now has an estimated 1,250,000 men under arms.

At the time the last contingents of reservists were recalled for service, it was announced officially the government had no intention of calling up additional classes except in "exceptional circumstances."

Informed Fascists have suggested, however, that England's adoption of compulsory military training might necessitate an increase in the size of the Italian army to maintain the ratio of power.

France, Rumania In Agreement

PARIS, April 29 (AP)—The French foreign ministry announced today after a final conference between the foreign ministers of France and Rumania on formation of a European alliance that the two countries were "in perfect accord."

Planes Reach Soviet Fliers in Icy Marsh

MONCTON, N. B., April 29—From Boston, New York and Canadian air bases, rescue flights converged here today in the mercy dash to two Soviet airmen, forced down onl isolated Miscou Island in their non-stop flight from Moscow.

MAP SHOWS POSITION OF RUSSIAN FLIERS

FLY TO AID—I. Mitzner, Amtorg radio engineer, Victor Butusov, Soviet air representative in U. S., P. Pozlov, Amtorg engineer, and Semon Borisenko, left to right, as they arrived at East Boston airport, prepared to take off in plane to rescue stranded Russian pilots.

Two rescue planes—bearing a doctor, Russian officials and crack American pilots—landed here after a speedy dash from Boston.

The party prepared to continue on by train to Shippegan Island, 26 miles from the marshlands where Pilot General Vladimir Kokkinaki and his radio-navigator, Major Mikhail Gordienko, crashed in the fog.

ONE FLIER INJURED

At the same time Canadian planes flew over the stranded victims—one ship landing on the ice-bound marshes.

Observers in a larger Canadian Airways plane flew low over the intrepid Russian fliers but dared not risk a landing.

H. F. Jones, pilot of the plane, said the Russian ship was cracked up on flat marshland, close to the water.

"I couldn't land," Jones reported. "But I dropped low and saw both men, surrounded by a group of Miscou Islanders. On of the fliers waved, indicating he was all rigit."

Observers said the other flier was sitting by his ship, apparently injured. Earlier reports stated that General Kokkinaki had suffered a broken rib in the crash.

VANDERBILT PLANE THERE

The small rescue ship which landed was piloted by Joseph Anderson, also of Canadian Airways. He succeeded in alighting about a mile from the wrecked Soviet plane.

First of the Boston ships to arrive here was Harold S. Vanderbilt's 14-passenger Lockheed, dispatched in reciprocal assistance for the aid offered by the Soviets to round-the-world Howard Hughes in his memorable flight a year ago.

On board was Dr. Louis S. Spector, a New York physician who speaks Russian, and Albert I. Lodwick, airplane manufacturer and friend of Howard Hughes. Lodwick chartered the ship in the name of Hughes to aid the stricken fliers, one of whom suffered injuries in the crash.

At the controls was a crack pilot, Russell Thaw, son of Harry K. Thaw and Vanderbilt's personal pilot. Co-pilot was Thomas Revierly.

Others in the group were Victor Butosov and Peter Kozolov, officials of the Amtorg Trading Corporation.

The second ship brought me-

Samoset Hotel, Plymouth, Burns

PLYMOUTH, April 29 (AP)—The old Samoset Hotel, whose register contains the names of Daniel Webster and Presidents McKinley and Coolidge, was swept by fire today.

Used only as a summer hostelry, the four-story, 150-room structure was unoccupied.

Firemen from Kingston, Duxbury, Middleboro and Marshfield responded to a general alarm but the interior of the building was destroyed before the flames were extinguished.

The hotel, built in 1846, is owned by Joseph Nogueria. It is assessed for $25,000.

A SOLOMON IN FILMLAND

CAROLE LOMBARD

HOLLYWOOD, April 29 (AP)—If, mister, you've found the management of even one member of the female species a problem, listen to the story of George Cukor and Eddie Woehler.

Cukor is director of "The Women" which brings together a cast of 135—topped by Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford and Rosalind Russell—without a single man on the call sheet. Woehler is his assistant.

The big decisions will be Cukor's. He might be called Solomon for the purposes of this piece.

To the personable Woehler will fall the job of seeing that players are on time, that everybody's troubles are ironed out.

"They're all nice people," he says with a smile, "and I think we'll get along perfectly. I believe that because this is something different, the girls will be on their toes and anxious to make it an important success."

With production barely under way, there already has been one fight.

Fatal Jail Fire Still Mystery

State Fire Marshal Stephen C. Garrity reported today that a fire which took three lives at the Worcester County jail, April 30, was of "undetermined origin" and that there was "no evidence of incendiarism."

"Various theories as to the cause have been advanced in the absence of positive evidence," the marshal added. "No definite cause has been determined."

He further said that "all persons supposed to know or having means of knowing material facts" were examined during the inquest.

The three prisoners, one a Canadian, perished in underground cells of the jail.

IDENTIFY MALDEN AMNESIA VICTIM AS NEW YORK WIFE

A 35-year-old, well-dressed woman, found semi-conscious in a taxicab and taken to the Malden Hospital last night, identified herself today as Mrs. Marilyn Cameron of 77th street, New York.

TO WED—Marie Vescio, 16, of Norwood, whose elopement to New York was cut short, will marry Alva C. Nordstrum, 20, in June with parental blessing.

The woman, apparently a victim of amnesia, said she had been visiting friends in Malden but offered no other information to hospital about her identity, other than her name and address.

She remained at the hospital until arrival of her husband.

The woman, who was about five feet, three inches in height, wore an expensive mink coat and a wrist carried jewelry.

A taxi driver, John O'Donnell, said he picked up the woman at a drug store, where police found she had purchased some medicine.

Believing she might have taken an overdos, hospital doctors administered a medicine to neutralize the effect.

Defer Sentence Of Confessed Salem Robber

SALEM, April 29—Three more weeks of suspense hung today over an attractive young wife and five children when Lionel Bernier, 29, heard the date for his sentence on three counts of robbery and one of larceny of $350 postponed until May 20.

Bernier had pleaded guilty to the charges, and was to have been sentenced today.

The postponement was granted by the lower court to allow the prosecuter to present evidence in the case, which involves two other men, Raymond J. Bernier, 21, no relation to the older man, and Roland C. Gauthier, 18.

The younger Bernier is scheduled to go on trial in the same court on the charges to which his namesake pleaded guilty. Gauthier, accused as the third man in a ring which, police say, held up at least two chain stores and a gasoline station, pleaded innocent.

The three were admitted to bail pending further proceedings.

During the time the robberies were committed, the Berniers had disappeared from their homes.

When they returned, a week later, Lionel suffering with a bullet wound, they told a story that aroused police suspicions. Raymond was subsequently picked up in Boston, apparently suffering from loss of memory.

DAYLIGHT SAVING 2 A. M. TOMORROW

Remember daylight saving time?—Well, it begins again tonight.

For those bewildered householders who are always doing things wrong the instructions couldn't be simpler.

Just set your clocks ahead one hour before you go to bed tonight. All Massachusetts clocks officially change from 2 a. m. to 3 a. m. tomorrow morning—but perhaps you better forget this part. Stick to shifting the hour forward at bedtime and you'll escape the usual woes that go with the yearly change.

Train schedules will continue to read standard time, but nearly all trains are being shifted to conform to the new time. Those who daily get an 8 o'clock train will still get the same time, even though the official time table reads 7 a. m. Buses, planes and steamers have made the same convenient arrangement.

Don't forget. Tonight's the night and the clocks are one hour ahead until daylight saving time ends in September.

French-Spain Border Closed

PARIS, April 29 (INS)—Reports that violent incidents occurred in Gerona, Spain, today caused officials of Generalissimo Francisco Franco's government to close the frontier.

Authorities at Perthus, on the French border, refused to give any explanations, but the belief was held along the frontier that the Spanish officials sought to keep news of the Gerona unrest from spreading.

The Grim Reaper Views His Handiwork.

Such might have been the outline of this remarkable photograph reproduced from Thursday's Boston Evening American, showing the wreckage of the Nicholson suicide automobile in Billerica.

Close examination of the tangled mass of iron and steel reveals a nearly perfect picture of the Grim Reaper, death mask and all, with a diabolical grin on the features.

Further study shows what appears to be a hat crowning the head.

John Smith, chief engineer at the Massachusetts Hospital School in Canton, in a letter to the American, calls attention to the peculiar formation of the twisted wreckage.

The fatal accident, the results of which are depicted here, occurred when Lester P. Nicholson of Billerica, after stabbing his wife in a family quarrel, deliberately committed suicide by crashing his car head-on into a 10-ton tank truck, while driving at the rate of 70 miles an hour.

The automobile was wrecked and the truck tossed 60 feet by the impact.

3 BEAT PRISON GUARD

BRIDGEWATER, April 29—In an attempted break from the state farm here, three inmates of the mental delinquent section, all committed for larceny and robbery, today set upon and seriously injured a guard who was escorting them to the motion pictures at the institution.

Only prompt intervention by two other officers saved the wounded man's life, according to Superintendent James E. Warren.

The injured officer was Thomas Hayes, who had just escorted his charges through one of the institution's doors, and was stooping over in the act of locking the door when the three attacked him.

The men were armed with metal-studded wooden blocks used on the legs of the farm beds in place of casters, Warren disclosed.

The first blow cut Hayes' head and half stunned him. As he grappled with the men the guard yelled for help, and he and his assailants tumbled down a short stairway.

His cries were heard by Guards John Miskinis and Edward Radka, who were in nearby corridors.

ORDER 3 RING DEAD EXHUMED

PHILADELPHIA, April 29 (INS)—Spurred by confessions from two principals in Philadelphia's notorious murder-for-insurance ring, detectives today obtained court permission to exhume the bodies of three more of the upwards of 100 victims suspected to have been caught in the conspiracy's deadly toils.

Court orders directing that the bodies of John Mandiuk, Antonio Romualdo and John Woloshyn be dub up provided the latest development in swift moves by which authorities expect to involve more than 75 suspects in America's greatest "mass murder" case.

The remains of the men—whose respective widows all are held without bail on murder charges—will be disinterred Monday, authorities said.

Immediate chemical examination will be made on the bodies of the first two men, investigating officials revealed.

Reveals 'Test Tube' Baby Secret as Aid To Other Women

CHICAGO, April 29—To point the way to other women who want to be mothers, but who cannot fulfill their dream, Jean Gordon, 28-year-old Chicago divorcee, today described how she underwent preparations for a "test tube" baby.

Two weeks ago, she revealed, a prominent physician gave her the first of three treatments, all to take place within 30 days.

"The man went to the doctor's office in the afternoon, and submitted to his part in the experiment. I went that evening. It required only a few minutes."

SELECTS "PERFECT MAN"

Miss Gordon disclosed that the father of her "laboratory baby" is the husband of another woman—a "perfect specimen of virile American manhood" whom she has known for four years, and they have been discussing the experiment since last January.

"He is tall and dark, with curly black hair and dancing dark eyes—just the type of man any woman would select to be the father of her child," said Miss Gordon.

She added:

"I examined my conscience thoroughly before I decided on this step, and came to the conclusion that just because a woman does not care to wed, there is no reason she should be deprived of the glory of motherhood.

SHARES HER SECRET

"It was my plan to keep this secret locked in my heart, but other women must face the same problem. There must be hundreds of women, many married, who yearn for motherhood and are thwarted. So I decided to describe my own case to help them."

Miss Gordon's disclosures came only a short time after Mrs. Virginia Cleary, 28, announced that she is seeking a "perfect father" for a test tube baby.

She is suing for divorce from her husband, John, 42, who refused his consent to the procedure.

KELLY'S SISTER LOSES JOB

Miss Catherine A. Kelly, sister of former Lieutenant-Governor Francis E. Kelly, today was listed among 14 employes of the State Welfare Department to be dropped as an economy measure May 13.

Announcement of the cut was made by David I. W. Armstrong, newly appointed head of the department.

Armstrong said that 13 of these given notice of dismissal were discharged because of budget requirements. All are classed as "emergency junior social workers."

Miss Kelly, he said, was given notice because of Gov. Saltonstall's orders that no probationary employe who took non-competitive examinations for their jobs may be retained long enough to qualify them as permanent employes. Miss Kelly was appointed a senior statistical clerk Dec. 1, following a "non-com exam."

The 13 junior welfare workers given notice of dismissal were: Jane J. Brennan of Somerville, James A. Carr of Jamaica Plain, Lena K. Cloutier of Orange, Mrs. Gertrude Holland of North Chelmsford, Mrs. Barbara Fearing of Winthrop, Mrs. Anna M. Gaffey of Wollaston, Daniel F. Gaines of Belmont, Mrs. Estelle S. Mawr of Dorchester, James K. McGrahey of Lawrence, Mrs. Esther C. O'Connor of Arlington, Murray J. Potofski of Brighton, Thomas A. Regan of Roslindale, and John E. Roberts of Lawrence.

They received $1320 a year.

Acting on the expressed disapproval by more than 2000 Massachusetts doctors of the state's law making it a criminal offense to give birth control advice to women, 400 representative physicians have organized a Committee for the Defense of Medical Rights, with headquarters in Boston, it was announced today.

Massachusetts, it was pointed out, is the only state in which such a law is in force. Officers of the newly former committee are: Dr. William H. Robey, president; Dr. Robert L. DeNormandie, vice president, and Dr. Somers H. Sturgis, secretary.

Dr. DeNormandie made the announcement.

Shortly after the committee of four operators and four miners convened today, the operators withdrew until 3 p. m. to discuss the contract question privately.

Lewis later told reporters it was his opinion "that this farce should be ended and by next week the operators should have decided" whether they would make up their minds and sign a contract.

POLES MASS 1,300,000 MEN, DEFY HITLER

Planes Guard Cities, Ready to Raid Nazis

WARSAW, April 29 (AP)—Poland, faced with German demands on Danzig and the Polish Corridor, took extra military precautions on her frontiers today and warned Adolf Hitler his Reichstag speech had only "stiffened" Polish resistance.

The Polish press, a few hours after political editors had been summoned to the foreign office for a conference, unleashed a bitter attack on Hitler, declaring his denunciation yesterday of the German-Polish non-aggression pact and his new demands had "completely destroyed" all hopes of peaceful co-operation.

At the same time the Polish war ministry set in motion a series of precautionary measures, especially near Danzig. Most of the measures were not disclosed, but Poland already had 1,300,000 men under arms.

PLAN GERMAN RAIDS

The army scheduled huge demonstrations of air strength over all cities for Sunday. Polish citizens then will have an opportunity to view fast bombers and pursuit planes never exhibited in Poland before, and of the type which, the army said, would raid Germany in event of conflict.

The tone of the press emphasized the firmness of Poland's attitude expressed by a foreign office spokesman that attempts to put pressure on Poland would be answered "promptly and in the same manner," the independent newspaper Kurjer Poleki said.

"Hitler's speech was a speech of a man burning all his bridges—bridges that would have permitted Germany to avoid throwing herself into the precipice of war."

PRICE OF PEACE

"The one-sided denunciation of the naval treaty (the 1935 Anglo-German naval pact) was accompanied by demands for colonies, brutal rejection of the hand bringing peace from across the sea (President Roosevelt's), and the burning of the bridge uniting Poland and Germany in the form of a non-aggression pact—these were the elements of the speech."

The paper declared Germany demanded Danzig and "our sovereignty over part" of the Polish Corridor as the price for resuming the non-aggression treaty and that "not a single Pole will agree" to such a price.

"We will never exchange our rights for a worthless scrap of paper, the paper declared.

The nationalistic Warszawski Dziennik Narodowy, in an obviously inspired editorial, said "Poland has nothing to give Germany. In no case will we give up our firm decision to defend our rights in Danzig and the integrity of Pomorze (Polish Corridor).

"Hitler's denunciation of the non-aggression pact will only contribute to the dispersing the illusion among the few Poles who believed in the possibility of an understanding with Germany."

Danzig Nazis Await Hitler

FREE CITY OF DANZIG, April 29 (AP)—The Danziger Vorposten, mouthpiece of Danzig Nazis, declared today that the Free City from now on would be Reichsfuehrer Hitler's "personal concern."

Hitler's Reichstag speech yesterday in answer to President Roosevelt's peace proposals, the newspaper said, has put an end to all conjecture over the possibility of a Polish protectorate over this once-German Baltic port.

"The Fuehrer's speech," said the Vorposten, "has relieved us of worry about Danzig's future. Its fate is now the Fuehrer's personal concern.

"Whatever may happen our fate will not be worse than what Hitler proposed to the Poles when he asked for the return of Danzig to the Reich."

France Fears Nazi Coup

PARIS, April 29 (INS)—Chancellor Adolf Hitler's assurances in his Reichstag speech that the Reich has no further territorial demands against France failed to ease the apprehensions of the Paris government today.

Authoritative quarters expressed fears that Hitler's address may presage a German naval coup or a sudden move to take over the free city of Danzig.

In the French view, the Fuehrer tore up his written promise not to attack Poland when he denounced the German-Polish agreement. One French source said:

"Hitler has got Europe where he wants it—in a condition of frantic uncertainty."

ANGLO-RED PARLEY HITS SNAG

LONDON, April 29 (INS)—Soviet-British negotiations aimed at a possible Anglo-French-Russian triple entente against aggression ran into trouble today as British Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax conferred with Soviet Ambassador Ivan Maisky.

British quarters said the two diplomats were reviewing the status of negotiations and asserted conversations were proceeding with suggestions from both sides. But Soviet circles declared the conversations were "very unsatisfactory and inconclusive."

Soviet quarters said Maisky, apparently upon instructions from Moscow, sought assurances that the Anglo-Polish and Anglo-Rumanian mutual aid arrangements would not be directed against Russia.

Maisky also was said to have asked Halifax to extend firm British guarantees to Estonia and Latvia and to guarantee Russia's territorial integrity in exchange for full Russian reciprocity.

Lord Halifax was said to be "evasive" when confronted with these demands. The Soviets said they anticipated the British government would formulate a counter-proposal. Meanwhile, there was still no indication as to when a British reply to previous Russian proposals could be expected.

Earlier Soviet proposals, never fully revealed, were concerned with military and technical aspects of the proposed "triple entente."

The British government, meanwhile, remained firmly determined to meet any threat of a German naval race following Hitler's denunciation of the Anglo-German naval pact by building "ship for ship" to maintain Britain's superiority at sea over the Reich.

What Boston Thinks of Hitler

HAS FOES HERE---AND FRIENDS, TOO

A note for the editor:

Dear sir: I would take it as a personal favor if you would make far and few between such assignments as you just thought up for me. It was a good idea, but look what happened.

"Go out and see what the man in the street thinks about Hitler's speech," you said.

I talked to about 20 persons in an hour and they were about equally divided, pro and con. They said, somewhat in this order:

"Hitler is right. He's only getting back what was his."

"Hitler is mad. He'll get the whole world into war."

I got a piece of candy from two people celebrating their third wedding anniversary—their baby'll be two next month! I got a glass of orangeade from a very happy old fellow, and I got a neat foot in the ankle just above my instep. I'll show you the bruise.

Well, these people made sense:

John F. Fitzgerald of Myrtlebank avenue, Quincy, said he thought Hitler was getting back only what had been taken from Germany by the so-called democratic nations at Versailles.

P. J. Powers of Lawbwood place, Charlestown, said:

"Hasn't he gotten back all he lost by now? It's too bad this has to go on. We're headed for another war, and we should have had our lesson in the last one. America, particularly, went into the war to save democracy, and look at democracy now."

Mr. Powers also had an excellent suggestion of his own. He thinks the world should go back to Christian principles.

James Hedges of Halleck street, Dorchester, and his pretty wife, Georgia, were the married couple I mentioned. With them was Vera Hedges James' sister.

James felt Hitler was right; that he deserved what had been taken from him. The girls were against him.

"My little baby'll be two next month," said Mrs. Hedges softly. "That's why I don't like war."

Then I made the mistake of going up to a group arguing furiously about Communism and Socialism. I started to say:

"Did you fellows hear Hitler's speech?" And that was when I got kicked in the leg, and also when I left. I went home.

Incidentally, everyone I talked to was against war, and not one of the young fellows said he would fight unless an army came to this country.

I'm against war myself, especially when just to ask a question about it gets a guy a boot in the shins.

JOE CARTER, (first casualty—if there is a war).

domestic distribution generally ignored the possibility of negotiations and concentrated on angry denunciations of Roosevelt.

Hitler's paper, Voelkischer Beobachter, in a double front-page headline underlined in red, said:

"The entire world was the earwitness to the crushing rebuff of Roosevelt," and added:

"After this political execution of Roosevelt by the Fuehrer, one is inclined to ask, 'Who would dare to speak today about Roosevelt's message?'

ROOSEVELT 'ARROGANT'

"What authority justified Mr. Roosevelt in sending his arrogant telegram to Berin? He must let it be said today that the head of the great German Reich declines to make explanations of the policies of the Reich, also speak upon request, to any one other than the German people, which alone has the right to request an accounting."

50,000 RUSH JOB FOR FAIR OPENING

NEW YORK, April 29 (AP)—With the opening of the New York World's Fair a scant 24 hours away, 50,000 workmen toiled today to put the vast exposition in shape for its debut.

Out of the erstwhile Flushing marshland, part of the mile-square aggregation of the fair's wonders still was short of completion, but the scores of finished buildings, thousands of exhibits, together with a full program of opening day ceremonies, promised plenty of attractions for the expected million visitors tomorrow.

RUSH WORK ON EXHIBITS

Most of the commercial displays—towering temples dedicated to everything from beer and bread to cars and communications — were ready.

The principal tardiness was in numerous national and state government displays, some of which still disclosed incomplete exteriors shrouded with scaffolding, interiors empty or cluttered with crated exhibits, and grassless grounds in the process of grading.

Barren of its much-touted stripteasers, the already-famous amusement area looked like a boom town on its first day, its streets echoing with the clatter of hasty hammers nailing up walls and roofs.

ROOSEVELT TO SPEAK

The main feature of the opening will be an address by President Roosevelt which will be broadcast throughout the world.

The address will be carried by all stations of NBC, CBS and Mutual.

This will take place at 1:30 p. m. (E. S. T.), three hours after the gates are thrown open to the public, and will be preceded by a parade of fair workers and army and navy detachments, and a dedication of the Temple of Religion at noon.

When dusk falls, a cosmic ray from a distant star will impel the Fair's huge illumination system, superbly brilliant in rehearsals, into action.

Rescue Fliers Off to Soviets

chanics to begin salvage operations. Pilot Ralph Bourdon and Co-Pilot Arthur Schwab were carrying the following group of radio and mechanical engineers: Peter Baranov, Isaac Mitzner, Nicholas Kozlov and Peter Smirnov.

Already a Royal Canadian mounted policeman and a doctor were battling ice floes across the 20-mile strip from Shippegan to aid the injured airman, described as General Kokkinaki.

Constable Marcel Therriault set out with Dr. Ulysses Bourgeois, planning to bring the injured flier back for treatment at a hospital at Bathhurst or Campbellton, N. B., if such treatment were found necesary.

The Russian airmen, who had hoped to dine in New York, crashed on lonely Miscou Island just before 8 o'clock Boston time, last night.

It was in the 23rd hour of flight that startled villagers on the tiny Canadian island heard the roar of motors and the lights of a ship circling their lonely island.

CRASH IN MARSHES

Lower and lower the big plane came until a crash was heard. Then up from the soft marshland almost five miles from the nearest house shot a series of flares, lighting the sky.

True to army ritual, neither of the Soviet airmen left their twisted plane. Both were standing by when Lawrence Vibert, the village storekeeper, led a party by boat to the rescue.

Because the villagers talk only English and French, and the visiting fliers speak only Russian, little headway was made until the fliers pulled out a map and pointed to Moscow. Understanding, Vibert pointed to Miscou Island. It was quickly gathered that food and a helter was wanted at once. The villagers made signs to the Russians to follow them, but the fliers shook their heads.

There are 20 miles of sea to the mainland from the spot where the crash occurred. The marshes are not frozen but are covered with soft bog holes, making it necessary for rescuers to push through the marshes with a boat.

When the plane was reached, the islanders found the injured flier stretched inside the ship and his comrade stood outside on guard. There was not a doctor within 20 miles and the nearest hospital is fully 60 miles away. Some villagers remained with them.

The weather was described as good when residents saw the monoplane, named Moskva (Moscow) circling and heard the motors failing. Both wings and both propellers were broken in the crash.

One motor was out of commission. It was evident that the plane could not be flown to the mainland.

Flight End Told by Witness

(The first person to reach the scene of the forced landing of the Moscow-to-New York fliers was Lawrence Vibert, proprietor of a grocery store on Little Miscou Island. His eye-witness account follows.)

By LAWRENCE VIBERT

MISCOU ISLAND, N. B., April 29 (AP)—About ten minutes to 9 (7:30 p. m., E. S. T.) I heard the plane flying low over the island.

It circled eight or ten times—the island is about 12 miles long—looking for a place to land. It came down on frozen mud at the edge of the island.

The plane had on its lights, but when it came down I couldn't see them any more. But it was nice and clear. The moon was shining. In about three-quarters of an hour I found where they were.

One of the men—the pilot fellow—was hurt. I think he had some ribs broken. The other fellow was all right. Sometimes the one who was hurt showed he was in pain. I wanted to get them away and take them to my house, but they wouldn't leave the plane.

After a while we could sort of understand each other. It was easy to see they wanted food, so I got some and took it back to them. I don't know what else they wanted except a doctor.

I think the radio was broken, so they couldn't send for help. It's a hard place to get to, but a light plane could land a half mile from where they are.

I'm going back this morning and bring them some more food.

WORK AMONG CHILDREN SPELLMAN'S GREAT JOY

The young bishop takes up his duties at home and, as the full years roll along, no less than 350,000 Boston children, boys and girls, pass under his hands in the Sacred Sacrament of Confirmation.

And the Vatican, seeking to bestow new honors upon him, makes him a Knight of Malta, one of the highest ranks it has to bestow.

By JACK CONWAY
Copyright, 1939, by The Boston Evening American, Inc.

Bishop Spellman now had thoroughly adjusted himself to conditions in Greater Boston. He had received from Cardinal O'Connell a schedule calling for extensive activities in the diocese. One of his most gratifying duties was the confirmation of children.

While this was very exacting, requiring a long list of confirmations in both spring and fall seasons, each sacred occasion brought happiness to Bishop Spellman.

This was not alone because he could administer the Sacrament of Confirmation to so many hundreds of thousands of boys and girls, but also because at the same time he could exhort so many thousands of adults to greater love for God and greater fidelity in the performance of religious duties.

ALWAYS ENCOURAGING

Priests, sisters, parents and children learned to admire and love their genial and zealous bishop. He always had a word of hope and encouragement for young and old.

Day by day, month by month, His Excellency pursued his work among the children and adults, traveling throughout the diocese, visiting every parish, not once but many times.

On many days the bishop confirmed as many as 2500 children. The fatigue following a large morning class was great, but frequently the afternoon classes were even larger.

In all, Bishop Spellman during the years of his bishopric confirmed well over 350,000 children of the archdiocese.

This, with many ordinations and a full schedule of episcopal appointments of all kinds, filled the years of Bishop Spellman to overflowing.

IN ROBUST HEALTH

And yet His Excellency enjoys robust health, his spirit is buoyant, he never seems to tire under the performance of any duty no matter how long the time consumed or how heavy the responsibility.

On November 13, 1932, hardly more than a month after his arrival in America, the Vatican conferred a new honor on Bishop Spellman. The high regard in which he was held there because of his invaluable services to Pope Pius XI, and to Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state, was given concrete expression by his appointment as a Knight of Malta.

This organization of limited membership is composed of a few hundred distinguished laymen and a small number of church dignitaries. The society extends back 825 years, to the days when Catholic military organizations took part in the crusades.

GETS HIGH HONOR

The American Chapter of the Knights of Malta was established in 1926 by Pope Pius XI in recognition of the charitable and benevolent activity of prominent American Catholics. Up to this time only the three American cardinals, among American church dignitaries, had been recipients of this high honor.

On May 22, 1934, further word was received from the Vatican that Bishop Spellman had been honored by the decoration of the Grand Cross of the Sovereign Military Order of Malta. This is the highest ecclesiastical rank within the order.

Pope Pius XI followed with paternal solicitude the course of his beloved assistant in America. On many occasions His Holiness communicated to Bishop Spellman many other proofs of his strong affection. During the ceremonies incident to the Feast of the Purification in February, 1933, highly adorned candles were presented to His Holiness.

In token of his fatherly love, the Holy Father sent one of the most beautiful of these as a special gift to Bishop Spellman.

Bishop Spellman becomes pastor of the Church of the Sacred Heart in Newton Center — and new worlds present themselves for the conquering. Follow this story in its seventh installment in tomorrow's Sunday Advertiser.

N. Y. Bishop Here To Honor Spellman

Rt. Rev. Stephen J. Donahue, auxiliary bishop of New York, today said mass in Sacred Heart Church in Newton to climax a trip here to pay official respects of the New York diocese to its new archbishop, Most Rev. Francis J. Spellman, D. D.

The New York prelate arrived here last night. He was met at Back Bay station by Archbishop Spellman and the two prelates visited briefly with Cardinal O'Connell.

Later, at the Sacred Heart Rectory in Newton Center, they granted a joint interview, in which Archbishop Spellman announced that the date of his installation in New York had not yet been determined. An announcement will be made by Bishop Donahue within a few days in New York, he said.

In order that Archbishop Spellman may officiate before leaving for his new see in New York, ordination ceremonies of 21 young priests scheduled for May 18 will be advanced to May 3.

Because of his approaching departure, also, Archbishop Spellman will confirm only one more class of children at his own parish of the Sacred Heart.

Manning Note Tells Tobin of Resignation

Joseph P. Manning, for 28 years a trustee of Boston City Hospital, the last 21 years as president, resigned today while visiting at the office of Mayor Tobin in City Hall. The resignation, for "purely personal reasons," becomes effective tomorrow.

The mayor was not present to accept the resignation, having departed for Washington last night.

Manning, one of the best-liked officials of the city, left the following communication with one of the mayor's secretaries:

"Dear Mr. Mayor: As I told you several weeks ago, I feel that it is necessary that I must resign as trustee of Boston City Hospital and I hereby tender my resignation as such to take effect April 30, 1939.

"My reason for resigning is purely personal.

"I wish to take this opportunity to thank you for your kindness and for the consideration shown me whenever I had occasion to visit your office.

"With kindest regards, I am,

"Truly yours,

"JOSEPH P. MANNING."

The hospital head revealed to the Boston Evening American some time ago his intention to resign. He said at that time he believed it advisable to drop some of his many public activities.

The death of his wife several months ago was believed to have been a contributing factor in his wish to withdraw more to private life.

47 Take 2d Orders for Priesthood

In a private ceremony in the chapel of St. John's Seminary, Brighton, Archbishop Francis J. Spellman today administered minor orders to a group of 47 seminarians.

The minor orders, the second step in the life of a seminarian toward the goal of priesthood, were bestowed upon the group during a low mass celebrated by the Archbishop.

Assisting the new head of the New York archdiocese was Rev. Robert H. Lord an instructor and Monsignor Edward G. Murray, director of the Seminary.

Those who received the orders are all second year students at the seminary.

Early Pact Seen In Fuel Strike

Complete settlement of the fuel and coal truckmen's strike appeared near today after representatives of Local 68 tentatively accepted recommendations of the State Board of Arbitration. Ratification will be sought at a union meeting tomorrow.

Union officials reserved details of the proposed settlement. Labor Commissioner James T. Moriarty announced the board had made "certain new proposals which were accepted by the committee of Local 68."

Meanwhile Clifford F. Oliver, 27, of Meridian street, East Boston, faced court today as aftermath of a clash of striking oil tanker seamen in Everett. He was charged with throwing a brick through a window of an automobile used to carry strikebreakers.

Palmer Heir's 4th Wife Sues

SARASOTA, Fla., April 29 (INS)—Romance that started in a hamburger stand today brought Potter D'Orsay Palmer III, heir to a $10,000,000 hotel fortune, and his ex-waitress wife, Louise Abatiello, into court.

Admitting their marriage was on the verge of disaster, Palmer's attractive young wife said she had filed suit to cancel an agreement she made with her husband's parents, the socially prominent Mr. and Mrs. Honore Palmer, releasing part of her interest in her husband's estate.

The suit, lodged against the parents, charged they had conspired and connived with Potter Palmer III to force her to sign the pact.

WPA Acts Host At Herring Run

The WPA-MDC Division of Recreation will sponsor a party for nature-seekers and sportsmen tomorrow in East Weymouth to witness the annual herring run, where for more than a hundred years these "alewives" have been coming up Back river in their yearly "spring running" at the spawning season.

The spawning-beds in the shallow waters of Whitman's pond in Weymouth, now barred by a high dam and two waterfalls, have for more than a century been the natal home of these alewives, and long ago the town of Weymouth provided for their continuance by passing a law compelling those who blocked the stream to transport a certain number of barrels of spawn-fish up river and around the dam into the quiet waters of this freshwater pond.

Harry George Higbee, staff naturalist and an authority on the subject, will be present to explain the story of the run, tracing the history of the fish from spawning to their return to the ocean to die.

No 'El' Fare Boost, Mayors' Board Votes

Instead of increasing car fares, the Metropolitan Transit Council, made up of the mayors and selectmen of the 14 communities served by the "El," have voted to meet the 1938 deficit of more than $3,000,000 from the funds of the 14 communities.

DEDHAM COURT READY

Dedham's new courthouse, costing $250,000, will open for county business on Monday without official ceremony.

A BIRTHDAY STATEMENT

The First Year Anniversary of the Combined Record-American

We take pride in pointing to the accomplishments of the past eleven months. This has been a period fraught with uncertainties, yet Merchants of Boston have seen fit to acknowledge the ever increasing sales-power of the Record-American, with an ever increasing proportion of their linage. Here is a brief statement of that fact.

*DEPARTMENT STORES . . . the Record with a gain of 177,989 lines had the largest gain of any Boston daily paper in this most important classification. The Record's gain was 20,803 more than the combined gains of the other two gaining papers.

*READY-TO-WEAR . . . outstanding success reported almost daily — a few at random: Plotkin's hosiery advertisement of April 6th — a sell-out. Coleman's coat advertisement of April 3rd—a sell-out. Wethern's millinery advertisement of March 31st—a sell-out.

*MEN'S CLOTHING . . . the Record had the largest gain in Men's Clothing linage of any Boston daily. A 64,498 line gain, or three times the gain of the other two gaining dailies combined. Published nineteen different Men's Wear advertisements on March 31st.

*FURNITURE & HOUSEHOLD . . led all Boston newspapers in this classification. Carried 47% of the daily total, or nearly as much as all other dailies combined. Carried approximately 2½ times as much linage as the second Boston daily.

*JEWELERS . . . led all Boston newspapers in this classification. Carried 65% of the daily total. Led the second daily by 246,643 lines. Carried 141,813 more lines than all other Boston dailies combined.

*RADIO . . . led all Boston newspapers in this classification. Carried 74% of the daily total or almost three times as much as all the other dailies combined.

*CREDIT CLOTHING . . . led all Boston newspapers in this classification. Carried 90% of the daily total. Published approximately nine times the volume of all other dailies combined.

*GROCERS . . . with an increase of 61,776 lines the Record had the largest gain of any Boston newspaper in this classification. Despite the smaller page size it is carrying a full schedule from the two largest Food chains.

*NEW ACCOUNTS . . . gained in number of accounts in every month since the merger—likewise led all other dailies each month in the number of accounts gained. The best showing of any Boston daily in this important endeavor.

This is the sort of story Boston merchants like . . . without fanfare . . . without flourishes . . . without glowing adjectives . . . without pretty pictures.

JUST PLAIN FACTS!

In this, the first year of the combined Record-American's inception the following record has been achieved in the daily field.

Retail Display Linage—May 1, 1938, to March 31, 1939 and same period a year ago.

DAILY PAPER	THIS YEAR	LAST YEAR	GAIN OR LOSS

Linage Authority—Media Records, Inc.

*NOTE: 11-month figures quoted throughout because April figures are not available as yet. Report would be even more powerful were April figures included.

. . . And last but far from least, the Record-American circulation figure for the six months' period ending March 31, 1939, is 469,637. For the last three months our circulation has been 472,329. For the last month the circulation averaged 489,000. This report is concluded upon the optimistic note that both advertising linage and circulation are rising.

To those Boston merchants who backed their faith in the pulling power of these newspapers by increasing their advertising linage . . . and to the approximately half-million daily readers who each and every day lay down their good money to buy the paper of their choice . . . the management of the combined Record-American extends its sincerest thanks.

CARDINAL ASKS PRAYERS FOR PEACE

Special prayers for world peace were urged on Catholics throughout the archdiocese in letters received by pastors today from William Cardinal O'Connell.

Provisions were also made for special devotions in the interest of peace throughout the month of May. The letter was as follows:

"The present unsettled condition of the world is known to all of us," the cardinal wrote. "The menacing threat of a war which may engulf Europe and, perhaps the whole world, has aroused fear and dread in the hearts of civilized people. Peace and calm have given way to insecurity and anxiety. In the souls of many men greed and hate have usurped the place of justice and charity.

"Recognizing the danger which faces the world, our Holy Father, Pius XII, has set aside the month of May as a month of universal prayer for peace and asks the faithful, and particularly the children of his flock, to implore our Blessed Mother to intercede with her Divine Son, the Prince of Peace, that He may calm the storm and send us that peace which is the ardent desire of every Christian heart.

"I accordance with the wish of our beloved Sovereign Pontiff, I ask all the priests of the diocese to arrange for special devotions in their churches during the coming month."

All Boston Outdoors In 'May Day' Frolic

It was still April by the calendar, but it was May Day on Boston Common today.

Under the auspices of the Boston park department, costumed children danced around a Maypole, played games, heard a band concert and then crowned pretty six-year-old Anne Grady of Forest Hills as Queen of the May.

All these goings-on were on the greening stretch of ground near Lafayette mall.

Over at Parkman bandstand, throngs arrived early for the annual exercises of the ladies' auxiliary of the Massachusetts State Department, American Legion.

Their exercises were scheduled from shortly after noon until 5 o'clock, with music, many speakers and stirring patriotic exercises.

And over at the Charles street mall the Communist party of Massachusetts, once the center of attention—unpleasant attention at that—conducted its usual protest against the scheme of things.

No uniformed police were there for the Reds to shout "Cossacks" at; only a few plainclothes officers took a look occasionally to see that all was peaceful.

May Day itself, which is to say May 1, will be observed on the Common on Monday by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the State Department of Veterans of Foreign Wars from 11 a. m. to 6 p. m. with exercises at Parkman bandstand.

Boston Council, Boy Scouts of America, will hold their May Day celebration at the bandstand on Monday evening from 8 to 9 o'clock.

'Reds' Too Late For '40 Permit

Communists have filed an application for use of Parkman Bandstand on May Day, a year from now, but they were three days late. Mayor Tobin informed them the stand had been granted to the Women's Auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars for next year and a year from then.

BRADSHAW N.E. Building Gain Tops U. S. Average

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW
Financial Editor

The strategic position occupied by the construction industry comes in for some apt and expert comment in the current issue of the New England Letter prepared by the First National Bank of Boston.

While potential demand, taxes and property removal throughout the country are covered our real interest is in the purely local phrases covered in the letter . . . Which starts off with the observation that building activity in New England in the first two months of this year recorded the best percentage gain for the nation as a whole. In the nine year periods covering the boom of 1921-29 and the depression of 1930-38 some startling contrasts are brought to surprising focus. In the first period New England fell well behind the rest of the nation with New England's building activity showing less than one-half the gain recorded by the country as a whole. While in the second period New England's building activity was greater than that recorded by the nation as a whole.

OVERBUILDING In the boom era even allowing for a considerable amount of it, has been counterbalanced by an equal amount of building. And now we are faced with a period of replacement demand. If a change for the better can be seen in the New England section it may be safe for the country to begin to figure on a new normal . . . One other item of the good years but always the biggest of recent memory . . . Has any one First National Bank Letter reported that the number of families in the country increased by 10,000,000 from 1890 through 1938 . . . A shortage of adequate housing appeared . . . And we look for a process of building to catch up with that demand. It may be slow gradual and a bit fedious . . . But a steady increase in the population means more of New England business.

NEW TREASURER Selected by the board of governors of the Waltham Co-operative Bank is Walter E. Boright . . . He will succeed Irving F. Mayhew who is retiring after 45 years service in May 1. Mr. Boright was chosen for the position after the bank had spent several months looking over available young men in the co-operative field . . . The governors decided he was the leader and offered him the post . . . Now assistant treasurer of the Framingham Co-operative Bank he has had a thorough training in all phases of this highly specialized type of bank work . . . He attended the Pace School of Accounting and has taken the various courses offered by the American Savings & Loan Institute and at present is secretary of the latter's Boston Chapter.

EXECUTIVE . . . Personnel changes are announced by A. G. Spalding & Bros. of Chicopee . . . Following a meeting of the board of directors . . . Walter B. Geroud assumes the offices of secretary and treasurer . . . Replacing C. S. Lincoln whose request for retirement after many years of service was accepted with regret by the management . . . E. E. Combs assistant treasurer, has also resigned . . . Mr. Geroud held the offices of vice president with Spalding . . . Having charge of accounts . . .

SALES . . . Achievement during 1938 equals trip to the New York World's Fair . . . That is the story of five representatives of the International Business Machines Corp . . . Because of their meritorious records for last year they will journey to New York to attend I. B. M.'s Hundred Percent Club convention . . . With their wives as guests of the company . . . Roger M. Bell, Thomas V. Learson, Frank N. McCabe, Richard H. Morton and Norman H. Schnett are the salesmen who will thus enjoy the fruits of success . . . They will represent Boston at the opening session May 1st in the Hall of Music . . .

RUKEYSER The Wise Investor Keeps Mind Simple

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
International News Service Economic Commentator

Many investors become confused by knowing so much that isn't so. Brokerage chatter nowadays complicates prudent investment by psychoanalyzing the articulate Adolf, by interpreting the New Deal and gossiping about the future of the gold standard.

The fellow who keeps his mind simple is not a bad investment guide. The lunging of outside sentiment pro or con, the inevitable fad and gale, learn to significant factors.

And the international confusion a chain of restaurants reported that in the first quarter of 1939 it earned 13 cents a share, compared with 11 cents in the same period in 1938.

The figures present the best source measuring the efficiency of management. The simple summary figures leave out irrelevant sentiment and politics.

Investors who keep their minds simple, buy for cash, and stay with securities of well-managed companies in progressing industries, do better than the financial sophisticates who are forever flitting from peaks of extreme pessimism to poles of utter optimism.

Well-intended federal regulation of capital is necessarily largely negative. It takes the form of "thou shalt nots," contributing little to the positive job of diverting real savings into industrial channels needing capital.

The new trend tends to put a premium on the type of management which can finance enterprises largely through corporate savings.

Yet the sponsors of the undivided corporate profits tax, before it was amended, sought to dry up this important source of business capital.

That experiment on top of security regulation, tended to interfere with the process whereby dollars at work help to provide jobs for men. Fortunately, the tax "reform" has been so substantially modified that it is no longer a major deterrent. Yet, the rise in total taxes payable by business enterprise militates against adequate corporate savings.

BUILDING BOOMED IN FIRST QUARTER

CHICAGO, April 29 (AP)—Building activity during the first 1939 quarter was the best for the period in seven or eight years a nation-wide survey disclosed today.

Dollar valuation of residential and industrial construction in 44 states for which building permits were issued during the quarter was estimated at $344,189,502, the National Association of Building Employers reported.

This, compared with $305,152,814 in the initial 1938 period, $321,433,138 in 1937 and $302,954,791 in 1936, which up to that time was the best in four or five years, the survey said. Home building in 34 leading cities increased 113 per cent during the quarter, compared with the like 1938 period.

Easily available financing for home modernization and replacement of obsolescent homes contributed to the upturn, said J. E. McCaffrey, executive secretary of the association.

BUSINESS SEES REVIVAL SIGNS

NEW YORK, April 29 (AP)—Scattered signs of a revival in buying raised business hopes this week for a reversal of the seven-year decline of industrial production.

Demand for raw materials and foodstuffs increased. The cash price of sugar was boosted by heavy buying believed to be in part for accumulation of war reserves.

The domestic market for copper snapped into action as a producer hoisted the quotation to 10½ cents a pound, up ¼. Textile wholesale markets were busier.

The stock market generally continued to play for time in a waiting course but cautious buying outweighed the selling in bonds. U. S. Treasury obligations advanced to record peaks.

"AN OVERLARGE FAMILY is a luxury," Dwight Anderson, [illegible] American Country Life Association [illegible] National Rural Home Conference in Lexington, Ky.

Not every man shares this belief. You will find thousands of fathers who regard their children as a millstone dragging them down to defeat but as a continual inspiration raising them to achievement and success.

Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy is an illustrious example. Harvard graduate with the classical 1912 banker, businessman, government official and diplomat, his progress has been certain and consistent.

Kennedys and Eight of Nine Children

And not even the most confirmed bachelor will say that the presence of nine children in the Kennedy home could in any way be considered a handicap.

One might mention numerous other fathers of big families, not excepting Oscar Dionne [illegible] of the quintuplets.

It was [illegible] Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard was undoubtedly thinking way back in 1911, when he said

"I believe no restriction of the birth rate can be supported either by morals or economics. It is the high birth rate that is economical. The durable satisfactions of life depend in large measure on having the normal number of children. The durable satisfactions of life are not obtained by persons that have no children."

TEACHER STANDARDS in Massachusetts have suffered badly in the past quarter-century. Such is the complaint of Mrs. Arthur N. [illegible], chairman of the Education Committee of the League of Women Voters, who explains:

"Years ago men and women sought election to school committees for the service which they could render to education. Today many politicians run for the office to further their own political ambitions.

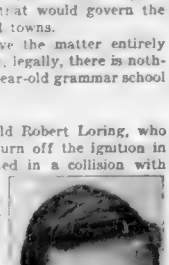
"Consequently more than two-thirds of our high school teachers do not have qualifications that would enable them to teach in California, Arizona, Washington or the District of Columbia."

If you look behind the news you will find what irks Mrs. Schlesinger is the absence of a state teacher certification law.

Despite the recommendations of the Department of Education and numerous interested persons the Legislature has repeatedly resisted efforts to set up standards that would govern the appointment of instructors in cities and towns.

The Legislature has preferred to leave the matter entirely to local school officials with the result that, legally, there is nothing to prevent a [illegible] having a 15-year-old grammar school graduate to teach Latin in an academy.

A HERO INDEED is 11 year-old Robert Loring, who had the remarkable presence of mind to turn off the ignition in the Concord school bus after it overturned in a collision with a freight train.



ROBERT LORING

Like a real hero, Robert is modest. He refuses to regard his quick thinking as worthy of praise. He explains it thus:

"I read what to do in an aviation book. They instruct every flier to shut off the power when his plane goes into a crash. The purpose is to prevent fires. I only did the natural thing."

Rudyard Kipling, beloved British poet, wrote: "If you can keep your head when all about you are losing theirs . . . you're a man my son." I won't have asked for a braver young friend.

To quote the great editor Arthur Brisbane who often and wisely observed:

"It is not so much what you read that counts. The important thing is what you remember."

Human Side of News -:- by EDWIN C. HILL

IF ONE HAD to pick a planetary hot spot with a long distance record for [illegible] spirits, bringing back [illegible] similar homicidal things he couldn't do better than try a scientific bet on Tangier.

It was there that Hercules wrung the neck of Antaeus and stole both his wife and the town. Antaeus bounced back and bopped Hercules with one of his old mauls, heftier trifients.

Then came the Phoenicians, Carthaginians, Romans, Vandals, Visigoths, Arabs, Spanish, Portuguese, British and French and Italians, with unending assault and battery, mayhem, larceny and murder, excitement but with no quiet home life for anybody in those parts.

So they pooled its weird hodgepodge of races, religions, languages, hatreds, intrigues, aromas, bazaars and sub-sub-basement crimes and placed the whole business under international control which has so far, has kept the rival hatchetmen at a standstill.

But it begins to look as if some kind of historic pay-off is at hand. As this is written, the cables report an army of about 75,000 of Franco's momentarily disengaged Moors, at the edge of the international zone, operating under control of the Axis powers.

IN 1907, a famous English diplomat said that a half dozen frigates based at Tangier could control the Mediterranean and Northern Africa. Lord Nelson was the first to insist that it be internationalized and neutralized.

All in all, it has been too hot for any one power to handle, and in the present flux and ferment of Europe it is one of England's worst headaches.

Oddly enough the Jews and Arabs are good friends in Tangier, particularly the poor and unfortunate among them. They have been pushed around for centuries by all contenders in the Afro-European dogfight, and they want no part of it.

Driven underground, literally and intellectually, they see no dividend for them in any groundswell warfare and none of the sympathetic and no doubt instigated hatreds of Palestine and Arabia Felix are in evidence.

About 35,000 of the population of 60,000 are Moors.

Political Parade -:- by GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN

WASHINGTON, [illegible] 29. It is astonishing how [illegible] Washington cracks down on two prominent bosses. Pendergast in Kansas City, and Hitler in Britain—has affected the [illegible] political situation. Gov. Stark's [illegible] on the overlord of Kansas City was prior to the 1936 [illegible] but nothing was done about it until recently, by which time the boss' loyalty to the New Deal for 1940 was considerably less than 100 per cent.

The New Deal has strengthened its hand by the [illegible] against Pendergast.

SO FAR as Boss Hitler is concerned, this is by no means the first time that violent political divisions have been created among the American people by a foreign issue.

As a matter of fact, the political parties as we know them today, under slightly different nomenclature, had their origin in 1794, over a question of foreign policy.

The division of the leaders and of the people, into two parties, the Federalist and the Republican parties, sprang from John Jay's treaty with Great Britain which was in reality Hamilton's treaty rather than Jay's.

THOMAS J. PENDERGAST
New Deal Attack Target

Today, also, the American attitude towards the quarrels of European nations is violently dividing American political opinion.

Mr. Roosevelt's bold gesture of peace to Mussolini and Hitler, for the present has greatly enhanced the President's prestige at home, even within his own party.

The Napoleonic wars continue to offer to those who advocate an active meddling by the United States in the present European situation, the chief argument to sustain the premise that America cannot remain out of a general European war.

It is of course true that interference with American commerce by both Great Britain and France had much to with an actually declared war against the former, and an informal war against the latter.

But those who adopt this argument overlook one vital factor which in reality forced the War of 1812 upon President Madison, who otherwise would have kept America out.

THE REAL cause of America's second war with England in 1812 was not depredations on American shipping, but English, and English-inspired Indian depredations against American settlers in the Mississippi valley.

It was the Western Senators and Representatives in Congress who constituted the war party, and forced Madison into war.

HITLER KIN LOYAL TO BRITISH

NEW YORK, April 29—Here's information: WAR DEPT. — Adolph Hitler's nephew, William Hitler, who now is visiting this country, received a phone call from the London Daily Express . . . "The conscription law soon will be enacted," Willie was told. "Would you return to England and volunteer?" . . . "I'm not going back to volunteer," replied the 28-year-old Hitler. "I don't see what I can do right now, because I'm sure there won't be a war this year. But if war does come, I'll volunteer—and fight for England."

BEING BALL ... TODAY MAKE MONEY AT CHARITY BALL

By BETTY ALDEN

THOSE WHO HAVE GAZED incredulously at surrealist art exhibits, and tried to figure out what the painters were talking about, would have been even more perplexed at the huge Circus Ball staged by the Institute of Modern Art at the Hotel Somerset, last evening.

Borrowing all the angles from the freakish "modern" paintings, the costumes of some of the dancers, the side shows and the floor show under an improvised "Big Top" presented a weird and incongruous enough spectacle to have delighted the hearts of even the most exhibitionists and publicity seeking of combat painters.

Sitting around on the floor and in every available corner of the Louis XIV Ballroom, which was completely transformed into a mammoth circus tent, many of our most prominent society matrons entered into the spirit of the affair by sipping soda pop, cracking peanut shells and licking ice cream cones as they watched the circus acts. . . .

Though the elephants and horses in the ring were made of papier mache, the show's live stock included dogs, ponies and a couple of white mice.

Liberty Dick, who is so tiny, stood on a chair with Carey Gulick to watch the show over the heads of the crowd, while in a box nearby Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Harris and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred McIntyre added to the colorful display in their brilliant costumes. . .

Handlebar Mustache

EVERY CONCEIVABLE circus character from the horse trainer to the snake charmer was represented among the costumed throng. . . Joe Woods, a well known North Shore horseman, was almost unrecognizable behind his handlebar mustache, and his wife, Betty, was a charming Oriental gypsy in trailing beige chiffon veils and hundreds of bangles . . . Olivia Ames, in a black and white Pierrette outfit danced with one trapeze artist after another.

Alida Goodwin's costume of black oilcloth banded in white, with a brief skirt and gardenia trimmed bodice, revealed neither Surrealist nor Circus influence, but turned out to be one of the most effective and becoming of the varied assortment . . . Charles Cunningham sported a brand new version of a full dress suit, with a tail coat made of clippings from Boston papers . . . Mrs. Cunningham wore a crimson drum major outfit.

Freddie Church in utilitarian overalls escorted his attractive wife, who wore violet lounging pajamas with the same chic which has won her the distinction of being one of Boston's best dressed younger matrons. Others in the merry throng were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Emmons, and Eloise Berglund, escorted by David Worcester, wore a striking ballet outfit of scarlet oilcloth trimmed with yards of magnolia blossoms . . .

Mrs. Francis Hart watched the proceedings with her daughter, Mrs. Vincent Palmer, who wore a lovely springlike costume of buttercup yellow with an emerald green ostrich cape . . .

Camilla

by Anne Stretton, who wrote 'PROPOSAL'

Who's Who and What's Happened:

CAMILLA and MARK might have come into a fine inheritance if their father, a famous but eccentric writer, had not neglected to marry their mother. When he died, he left no provision for his children, but a life interest in the home to

GLADYS, who had no maternal affection at all for Camilla and Mark. And he willed the lands of Dore to

SIMON, a cousin. Simon managed the estate efficiently, and was like a brother to Camilla and Mark. They had no idea he was in love until the day he brought his fiancee,

EVELYN, to Dore. Although Evelyn disapproved, on Mark's sixteenth birthday, Simon gave Dore to him. After Simon and Evelyn were married, Mark went away to school and Camilla met

STEPHEN FULLER, who was staying with friends near Dore. For years he had been hopelessly in love with

OLIVIA, his hostess' niece. He and Camilla went walking together, meeting outside her home. Soon he proposed marriage and Camilla, horrified at the discovery that her mother drank, readily consented. When Simon learned of this he forbade Camilla to see Stephen for a year, and sent her to live with an elderly woman in town. Once a week Camilla visited Simon and Evelyn. Returning from one of these visits, she felt deeply depressed. Evelyn, as usual, had been rude and Camilla had told her she would not come again.

Now Continue:

CAMILLA sat down [illegible] and, suddenly, found that she was crying. She [illegible] and threw the cigarette into the grate. Stupid [illegible] Thoughtfully, searching in her pockets for [illegible] idiot!" She pressed her fingers against [illegible]. And the whole thing was so silly: she wasn't [illegible] a week in the Charles Street household. Where [illegible] she go to Stephen, who did want her?

There was a tap on the door. Camilla didn't look round. She heard the maid say, "[illegible] Miss," and then the door shut [illegible] closed again.

She turned. A letter lay [illegible] addressed in Stephen's [illegible] writing. Rather slowly she picked it up and opened the envelope.

"My Darling,

"I must see you. I must. Do you understand? At half-past six, I shall be waiting by the steps behind the Albert Hall (not the Albert Memorial, my sweet). I have something to say to you. It is important, and, as I don't know that your cousin's ideas of authority may not extend to having your letters opened, I don't care to send what I have to say through the post.

"It is cold outside, so wrap yourself up warmly and try not to keep me waiting.

"Devotedly,
"STEPHEN."

"P. S. For Heaven's sake, Camilla, don't imagine that if you disregard your cousin's commands, and meet me, you will be doing anything wrong. You are not quite a child. And the only people who have any right to authority over you are, possibly, your mother and certainly your future husband. But, knowing that you feel that your cousin has a claim also, I should not ask you to disobey him if it were not extremely important."

And then there was another postscript. "Please come, Camilla darling."

Camilla glanced quickly at the clock. There remained an hour and a half before dinner. She looked down at the letter and thought of Stephen standing in [illegible] waiting as he had once waited on a winter's evening [illegible]

[illegible] argument as to authority [illegible] her once a little: Simon [illegible] "imagine" that she [illegible] was disobeying him. [illegible] was found out and he [illegible] see would have to face his wrath. And he would what would! [illegible] unpleasant. He [illegible] thought send her away [illegible] But the second post- [illegible] was different.

Please come, Camilla darling.

Of course she must meet Stephen and risk the consequences of being discovered.

Certainly it was cold. An acrid band of fog hung on the air. The pavements walked quickly, and Camilla walked quickly, too, turning the collar of her coat up round her face.

In the open spaces behind the Albert Hall, a thick patch of fog hung in the shelter of that great mass. Camilla hesitated.

She saw no one but an old woman, slowly dragging a reluctant spaniel towards Queen's Gate. As she stood for a moment, stamping with her feet against the cold, the fog cleared capriciously and a man, humped into his overcoat, detached himself from the base of one of the arches. He turned, and she saw that it was Stephen.

She ran forward.

"Hullo, Stephen."

He took her hands, and looked round. There was no one to see them. He drew her out of the lamplight, under the shadow of the arch, and kissed her.

"Oh, my darling; I did hope you'd come."

She smiled at him.

"I can't live on letters, you know," he said, "though your letters are so like you." He drew his hands down her arms and closed them over her elbows. "When must you go back?" he asked abruptly.

"Oh, in about half an hour."

"You can't come to my rooms and talk to me there?"

"Well, you see, I would be late for dinner. Mrs. Ashwright would ask me where I'd been."

"Would that matter?"

"She'd tell Simon."

Stephen's brows twitched together. Then he looked round at the fog-dimmed lights, the distant policeman who stood, coughing gently, on the corner, and then back at the dank, dark bricks of the archway.

"This is a terrible place in which to talk to you."

Camilla smiled.

"Is it very important what you want to say to me?"

"RUN AWAY?"

"Yes, it is." He looked down at her. His hands gripped her arms more tightly. "This waiting about, month after month—it's more than I choose to stand. Your cousin isn't your guardian," he went on, "and your mother is. And she is perfectly willing that you should marry me."

Camilla's face changed at that. She made a little movement, and he asked, "What is it, Camilla?"

"Nothing," she murmured. She put up her hands so that they rested on his arms. "Don't be angry, Stephen."

"I'm not angry, darling, but perhaps I'm a little impatient. You see—the whole thing rests with you. No one can prevent your marrying me as soon as you like." He raised her chin, looking down into her face with a rather wry smile.

"You wouldn't mind, though, if we weren't married for a long time, would you?"

Camilla smiled back hesitantly.

"If only we could see each other often. And if we didn't have to wait more than a year."

"Yes . . . But I want more than just to see you, Camilla. I want to have you for my own. I want you to marry me. At once."

"Do you mean run away?" Camilla asked after a little pause.

He nodded.

"Yes, my dear. I want you to come away with me tonight."

"If we were married at once I wouldn't be educated for any stupidity. I know how stupid I am, now better than I did at Dore."

"I hate it. If I wanted you educated I can do that myself. . . . Look here, Camilla, you'd better understand one thing clearly. If you won't listen to me, now I shall simply come down to Dore when you're at Dore; and I shall see you every day."

She stared at him.

"But Simon would get to know. Someone would tell him."

"Well—he can hardly have me flung out. That sort of thing can't happen in real life today."

[illegible] there was an inherited background of violence to Camilla's thoughts which was lacking in Stephen's mind. She was silent for a moment, and then she said, "All the men in our family have very hard tempers, Stephen. I don't know what Simon would do." And, she reflected, she didn't know what Mark would do, either.

Stephen [illegible] a little.

"Well, then little goose, if you don't want scenes between me and [illegible] you had better run [illegible] Simon will probably [illegible] but then accomplished fact [illegible] to remain."

Yes. Camilla paused, puckering [illegible] as she looked away. It would be different then . . . Wouldn't it? . . . and Simon would feel that, I think. It [illegible] to you, and nothing could change that."

CAMILLA AGREES

"Nothing." Disregarding [illegible] Iceman at the corner, and the thin [illegible] wreaths of fog, he put [illegible] into his arms. "Come away, my darling. I do want you so . . . . Can't you trust me?"

She raised her head quickly.

"It isn't that—it isn't that. Only—I don't want Simon to be very angry with me. Perhaps I wouldn't be alive if it wasn't for him."

Stephen said: "Well, my sweet, I don't want to be brutal, but—does it occur to you that you must sometimes be rather a problem to him? It isn't as though his wife cared for you."

"No, I see that. I do see it." Camilla flushed. She was silent, and Stephen, watching her face, didn't speak.

At last she looked up, shivering a little.

He held her away from him, at arm's length.

"Well, darling—is it yes, or no?"

"It's 'yes,' Stephen."

• • •

"You're desperately early, Camilla." Stephen, in a dark green dressing-gown, wandered over to the table on which Crosier had set out the sherry and glasses. "I suppose you were trained to be punctual."

Camilla glanced up at the little Empire clock which stood on the green marble chimneypiece of her drawing-room. She smiled.

"Well, Simon didn't like to be kept waiting — or Mark, either. And, anyway, I hate to have the visitors coming on top of me, when I'm only just ready."

As a hostess in the first home of her own, will Camilla be a disappointment to Stephen? Don't miss the thrilling chapter in Monday's Evening American.

STEPHEN VOWS LOVE. "Your mother is perfectly willing you should marry me," he tells Camilla.

Antique Coins Burglar's Loot

Fourteen pieces of silver, many of them 200 and 300 years old, were stolen by thieves today as they looted the home of Raymond W. Lee, prominent Cambridge attorney.

Police said the burglars apparently jimmied a kitchen window of the Lee home, located in Farwell place in the exclusive Brattle street section of Cambridge.

More than 200 of the silver pieces preserved for generations as family heirlooms, had been placed in chests. The thieves broke into the chests and cleared them of all contents.

Six large silver bowls and four quarts of rare liquor were also stolen.

Lee told the police the silver antiques exceeded $1000 in intrinsic value but were "priceless" because of their age.

Lieutenant James Landrigan said several fingerprints of the intruders were found by the jimmied window and on the chests in which the silver was stored.

New Column for American Readers ¦ Fans Get Chance To Air Views

I AM GOING to let you in on an office secret. There will be a brand new sports column in next Monday's Boston Evening American. Its name will be "The Grandstand Manager."

This will be a column of suggestions, criticisms and bouquets. The fans will write it. The fans will have an opportunity to express their views on baseball.

Why should fans be grandstand managers? Because they are the ones who pay the freight. They are the ones who support baseball. They are the ones who make baseball possible. They are the ones who should have a voice in baseball.

If you were a baseball magnate you would know what pitcher was going to be used in every game. You would know what batter was going to be sent to bat in the pinch. You would know when the batting order should be changed. You would know when a player should be benched. You would know when a player should be released. You would know when a player should be purchased. You would know when a player should be traded. You would know when a player should be sold. You would know when a player should be retired. You would know when a player should be suspended. You would know when a player should be fined. You would know when a player should be reinstated. You would know when a player should be promoted. You would know when a player should be demoted. You would know when a player should be transferred. You would know when a player should be released on waivers. You would know when a player should be claimed on waivers. You would know when a player should be drafted. You would know when a player should be optioned. You would know when a player should be released from the disabled list. You would know when a player should be released from the suspended list. You would know when a player should be released from the ineligible list. You would know when a player should be released from the voluntarily retired list. You would know when a player should be released from the military service. You would know when a player should be released from the minor league draft. You would know when a player should be released from the major league draft. You would know when a player should be released from the waiver wire. You would know when a player should be released from the trading block. You would know when a player should be released from the auction block. You would know when a player should be released from the free agent market. You would know when a player should be released from the arbitration process. You would know when a player should be released from the grievance procedure. You would know when a player should be released from the collective bargaining agreement. You would know when a player should be released from the rules of baseball. You would know when a player should be released from the umpire's decision. You would know when a player should be released from the manager's orders. You would know when a player should be released from the coach's instructions. You would know when a player should be released from the trainer's care. You would know when a player should be released from the doctor's orders. "Let the fellow alone," said Quinn. "He paid to get in to see this game, and has got the right to tell the players what they should do. Of course they will not pay any attention to him, but let the fellow holler if he wishes to do so. After all, he is a cash customer."

I have always held that the fans pay the salaries of baseball players and baseball managers. They are entitled to some consideration for their money.

It will be interesting to see what baseball fans think about baseball. Let them write in their views. Let them tell what is wrong with baseball. Let them tell what is right with baseball. Let them tell how baseball can be improved. Let them tell how baseball can be made more interesting. Let them tell how baseball can be made more exciting. GROVE TO OPPOSE OLD MATES

Triangular Meet At Stadium Today

The first outdoor meet for the Harvard track team takes place today when the Crimson horde meet the forces of Holy Cross and Northeastern at the Stadium.

In this affair the varsity and freshmen teams of all three colleges compete. The field events are due to start at 1:30 with the racing on at 2:30.

George Downing is ready to break the shot put record of 48 feet 10¼ inches which was made by John Dean, captain of the 1933 football team.

Don Donohue, a Harvard sophomore, may possibly break the Harvard 220 yard low hurdle record of 23.8s which is held jointly by Joseph G. Willis, '02, Eugene E. Record '32 and Milton G. Green '36.

The Harvard team appears to be strongest since the 1936 team. Among the outstanding athletes are Jim Lightbody, who will anchor the mile relay team and probably enter the 220-yard dash; Torbert Macdonald, football captain and dashman; Capt. Bob Haydock, high jumper; Joe Donnelly, quarter-miler; Al Hanlon, half-miler; Bob Gammons and Fred Ulen, dashmen; Nat Heard and Howard Mendel, shot putters, and Bill Shallow, hammer thrower.

Holy Cross has a crack mile relay quartet of Charles O'Donnell, Tom Cunningham, Jack Wallace and Fran Blanchfield, which placed second in the I. C. A. A. A. A. indoor championships. Jim Stanton and Jack Haley, distance runners, are also outstanding.

Northeastern will be handicapped by the fact that Capt. Danny Miles, high jumper and hurdler, is recovering from an illness and that Frank Masciarica, of Everett, former state interscholastic 600-yard champion, is a doubtful entry because of an injury.

Twyble's Pitching Subdues Bowdoin

AMHERST, April 29 (AP)—Carlton Twyble, Massachusetts State's right-handed ace, struck out 10 and kept seven hits well scattered today while shutting out Bowdoin, 6-0. The Statesmen scored three of their runs in the seventh, when Twyble started a rally with a Texas leaguer.

Foxx, Williams Ready to Take Positions

PHILADELPHIA, April 29—Bob Grove was waiting today to get his much postponed opportunity of hanging up his first win of the new baseball season.

"Mose" has been nominated to make his second arm test at the expense of the Philadelphia Athletics in this afternoon's Shibe Park battle, first of a two game series.

Jimmy Foxx and Teddy Williams, both of whom had been confined to their hotel beds with chest colds during the recent Fenway Park layoffs, reported this morning in greatly improved condition.

Jim Bagby was the expected choice to start tomorrow's game here after which the Red Sox trek to Cleveland for two games, Detroit for three, St. Louis for three, and two at Chicago. Then comes an exhibition with the farm hands at Louisville, winding up with three games at Washington.

MUST WIN ON ROAD

The Sox were prepared to play the first game of the week since last Wednesday, following which was one postponement against the Senators and two with the Yankees.

Joe Cronin was determined that his Red Stockings make a winning record on this present road trip, because in past years the Sox had a losing habit away from home.

The newly-started trip is a critical one, in view of the fact that the Yankees are way out front so early in the season, and if the Sox are to stay in the pennant race, they must get back to Fenway Park with victories attached to their standard all along the Western trails.

Dave Levin Beats Maynard in Maine

PORTLAND, Me., April 29 (AP)—Dave Levin, 194, New York wrestler, defeated Joe Maynard, 200, of Brooklyn, two out of three falls.

In other bouts, Ted Germaine, 180, of South Boston, defeated Chief War Eagle, 195, of Quebec, in one fall; Bill Curry, 200, Chicago, and Carroll Polska, 198, Holyoke, Mass., wrestled to a draw, and Jim Wallis, 196, of Worcester, Mass., fought Everett Kobbon, 197, of Texas, to a draw.

Yawkey Promotes Pennock, Duffy

By WALTER KILEY

Tom Yawkey and Joe Cronin instituted a radical change in the lineup of their Red Sox family before the Hose quit town for Philadelphia and the hinterlands . . . Herb Pennock becoming assistant supervisor of the far flung farm systems and lovable Hughie Duffy taking over as first base coach.

Yawkey feels that Pennock, one of the three greatest southpaws in all baseball history, will be of invaluable assistance not only in a scouting capacity but as an instructor to promising players in the minor league chain. . . . Pennock, it is agreed, will not interfere with the many team managers . . . but rather will work with them and help them . . . the step is looked upon as a promotion.

Herb Pennock

Duffy now becomes a field hand again . . . this man, whose active major league career started off way back there in 1888 . . . when he played for the Chicago Nationals . . . and whose batting average of .438 set while playing for the Boston Nationals in 1894 has never been approached in olden or modern diamond annals.

DUFFY GRAND GUY

Hugh Duffy is 72 years old . . . although when asked for his age he admitted only to 48 summers . . . he's still active and lively . . . as attested by his performance yesterday when he was out there in centerfield shagging flies propelled from the bats of Owner Yawkey and Manager Cronin . . . he lost one fly ball when a ray of sunshine burst through the clouds . . . he ducked away and landed on his back . . . but came up smiling.

Duffy is now the game's oldest coach since the days of the late Kid Gleason . . . He left town on his first trip in many years when the Sox departed for Philly last night . . . and left in far better style than in the old days when he had to hit the various towns the hard way.

Cronin looks to see him a big favorite when the club hits alien territory.

PRESIDENT AT CHARLOTTE

Pennock has been first base coach and has worked with the Sox flingers since 1936 . . . He was president of the Charlotte Club in 1935 . . . his last pitching was done for the Red Sox in 1934 when he hurled against Washington . . . the Sox coming up with nine runs in the first inning . . . plenty enough to win the game and give Herbie a big league finale of the pleasantest.

Just before leaving Duffy had a lot of nice things to say about young Tom McHugh, of Roxbury . . . a kid who has been showing mighty fine stuff as he worked out in Hughie's school for promising youngsters . . . Albert S. Caldwell of Roxbury, an inveterate baseball fan, mailed a 1918 World Series championship pennant to Cronin, one he bought when the Sox won the bunting the last time . . . and in his letter said he hoped to send him another such flag this September.

Hugh Duffy

Yawkey took advantage of yesterday's postponement to take his turn in batting practice . . . and lasted several hits off the left field barrier . . . But Mose Grove discredited Yawkey's ability . . . claiming that Boss Tom picked out Johnny Orlando to pitch . . . because he knew Johnny had nothing but a prayer.

The thermometer was 38 in the back of the grandstand when the game was called off on Friday because of cold weather . . . the later sun failed to warm it up any . . . The Yanks jumped town shortly after noon . . . glad to leave the cold weather . . . And Foxx, Moe Berg and a few of the others left with them.

Jake Wade was deeply troubled over the story that he was destined to leave Boston for the Yankees, in a trade with Jake Powell . . . Wade was to have made a down payment of a month's rent on a new Boston apartment . . . but the story so disturbed him he was loathe to shell out if he were to be traded.

High School Miss Breaks Two Marks

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., April 29 (AP)—Anna Martha Fates, Hancett High star, bettered two national interscholastic track and field records in a meet here.

In the 75-yard dash she twice surpassed the old record of 9 3-5 seconds, set in 1925 by Mary Callahan of Classical High, Lynn, Mass. She won the preliminary in :9.3 and the final in :9.2.

In the broad jump she leaped 17 feet 7 inches, bettering the mark of 16 feet 9¾ inches set by Ruth Moore of Concord Academy, Concord, Mass.

A weak Princeton nine proved easy for the Harvard varsity baseball team at Soldiers Field where the Crimson downed the Tiger 13 to 2. The weak defense of the Tiger squad was really their downfall for they outhit Harvard 10 to 8 only to commit eight errors afield. The cameraman caught Chub Robbins, Tigers' catcher, proving an easy out with Lupien making the putout at first. The same Lupien lad made eleven putouts in the contest.

Bottomley Joins Air Announcers

ST. LOUIS, April 29 (AP)—When baseball clubs fire their managers, they literally "give them the air." Sunny Jim Bottomley, one-time pilot of the St. Louis Browns, is the latest to join the former managers holding radio broadcasting jobs.

He signed a contract to give expert comment on the St. Louis station (KWK) and will go on the air for the first time today.

Bloomer Girl My Best—Wilson

By DAVE WILSON

(Selections for Fast Track)

BEST—BLOOMER GIRL, FIRST RACE

NARRAGANSETT PARK, R. I., April 29—Medway Stable's Bloomer Girl, a galloping winner at 'Gansett the other day, gets top billing in the initial heat here this afternoon. The four-year-old filly needs only to run back to her last victory over Letselope to make it two straight wins.

FIRST RACE

Bloomer Girl, Blue Grotto, Glenbroom

BLOOMER GIRL won her most recent start in hand and looks all over a repeater. BLUE GROTTO was away slow the other day. GLENBROOM won his last and cannot be ignored.

SECOND RACE

Whooper, Miss Tad, Ramrod

WHOOPER, third to Currants and Idle Sun the other day, looks good as anything in the second race, another wide-open affair. MISS TAD won her last easily and figures very close. RAMROD suffered much interference when beaten by Viajero.

THIRD RACE

Idle Sun, Goldman, Bright Sox

IDLE SUN, second to Currants in a swiftly-run race the other day, appears to have a royal chance of clicking at good odds. GOLDMAN, winner of three straight races, is coupled in the wagering with BRIGHT SOX, which won his initial start of the meet.

FOURTH RACE

Terpsichore, Listaro, Pordina

Barely beaten by Chief Nadi and Stephen Jay in his initial start of the current meeting, TERPSICHORE is descending the claiming ladder and should waltz right into the winner's circle. LISTARO is shedding weight and looks all over a repeater. PORDINA will run coupled in the wagering with the top choice.

FIFTH RACE

War Minstrel, Wise Prince, Mythical King

WAR MINSTREL will have to turn tables on WISE PRINCE. The latter is game but may be found wanting over the route. MYTHICAL KING trained well at New York before shipping.

SIXTH RACE

Passing Eve, Buster Boy, Sir Reg

Barely beaten by Ozark the other day, PASSING EVE looks much the best, although moving up the claiming ladder. BUSTER BOY and SIR REG rate in the order named.

SEVENTH RACE

Stepacola, Ellen H., Dianapat

STEPACOLA and ELLEN H., which run coupled in the wagering, are both capable of winning, and appear to have a stranglehold on the lion's share of the spoils. DIANAPAT was beaten by the top pair in her most recent race.

EIGHTH RACE

Skipped, Our Teddy, Alpenglow

Third to Time Clock and Inactive the other day, SKIPPED should be able to take time out for lunch and still beat out the beefies opposing her in the nightcap. OUR TEDDY and ALPENGLOW figure as named.

5 Derby Candidates in Same Race at Downs

PICK TECHNICIAN TO WIN CLASSIC

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 29 (AP)—Woolford Farms' Technician and four other more lightly regarded Kentucky Derby eligibles meet today in the six-furlong, $1000 Daniel Boone purse on the opening day card at Churchill Downs.

Technician, rated at 4 to 1 to win the Derby next Saturday, was the odds-on favorite to take the measure today of Light Spur, Giles County, No Competition and Fern Creek, all Derby eligibles. Bugles Blow completes the field, with Milky Way's Giles County and no Competition grouped as an entry.

The feature race on the card inaugurating the 19-day meet at the Downs is the $2500 added Clark Handicap for three-year-olds and up at a mile and a sixteenth. The Clark is as old as the more famous Kentucky Derby, having been first run in 1875. No Derby eligible is entered in the Clark. Torey, Arabs Arrow and Co-Sport were the overnight favorites.

Chief interest at the Downs today centered on the arrival of W. L. Brann's Challedon and Porter's Mite from the stable of W. E. Boeing. Both horses arrived from Maryland in good shape.

Trainer Lou Schaefer was optimistic over Challedon's derby prospects but said he would not start the colt before the derby. Ted Horning in charge of Porter's Mite indicated the son of the Porter would get a test Wednesday in the derby prep.

Track Superintendent Tom Young said 1360 horses already were quartered at the Downs and additional arrivals probably would swell the number to 1500—a record number for the derby track.

Jockey Leon Haas up on T. M. Dorsett, Derby headliner, which starts in $20,000 Wood Memorial at Jamaica today.

Hash is the unpretty name given this sturdy three-year-old thoroughbred entered in next Saturday's Kentucky Derby by the Greentree stable.

Umpiring Hard Job--- Quigley

NEW YORK, April 29 (INS)—Ernie Quigley, the professional-panned grand oompah of National League umpires, eased back in his throne-room and reflected aloud that baseball decision-making had become a decidedly more attractive profession since the dawn years of the bat-and-ball sport.

"But umpiring was and is a hard job," said the immaculately groomed Quigley, who was dubbed supervisor by President Ford Frick in 1937 after serving in the ranks for 23 campaigns.

"In point of work out on the field, it's not any easier than years ago. Now, instead of two umpires to a game, we have three, so that the diamond can be covered more effectively. To do a good job of officiating is no simple task. It requires great concentration and a real love for the work.

"I think it's well worth stressing that last item. You will find that over the seasons the men who have made a brilliant success of umpiring are those with an intense interest in it. They study their assignment and bring much thought to it. More persons of this type are entering the profession now."

"Certainly it's a better profession now," Quigley permitted his noggin to perform an austere nod. "Despite everything though, the difficulty of the work hasn't become less."

BIERMAN INSISTS ON GRID SINCERITY

NEW YORK, April 29 (AP)—What he's been seeing in spring practice at Minnesota caused Bernie Bierman to issue this order: "Play football or turn in your suits."

The Georgia-Florida League has outlawed the old hidden ball trick—caused too much confusion . . . Doc Robb, who trained Jim Braddock for all his important bouts, will be Lou Nova's chief second against Baer.

They call him Midas.

Before arriving in New York from Washington, the King and Queen of England will leave the train at Red Bank, N. J., (pop. 13,000) and ride down the main drag . . . Red Bank also is the home town of Mike Jacobs who'll probably have the ticket rights.

Tony Galento's debut on the coast was described as weary, dreary, teary and bleary . . . The Herald-Tribune has lined up such headliners as Wallace Wade, Duke; Dutch Meyer, Texas Christian, and Bill Kern, Carnegie Tech, for its coaching school at the World's Fair in August.

PITCHER EVANS IN TROUBLE

The Dodgers are having trouble finding a room mate for Pitcher Red Evans who likes to smoke a 10-year-old pipe in bed . . .

Fay Fabiani, the fiddling mat maestro, was feature soloist at a concert in Philly by the Italo-American Philharmonic Orchestra. The music critics gave him three stars.

Bill Brandt, National League publicity chief, calls Manuel Salvo of the Giants "the Mastodonic Maestro of the Mound" . . . Sounds like Bill is warming up for a job with the circus.

Elmer Hackney of Kansas State hurled the 16-pound iron ball 52 feet, 1½ inches in the Kansas relays for his sixth record of the year . . . Coach Ward Haylett thinks maybe he'll hit 54 feet in the Colorado relays today.

A New York paper said it hears there is a plot afoot to make Luke Sewell manager of the Indians.

When he rejoined the Tribe after being canned by Brookiyn, Luke said:

"Now I know how the children of Israel felt when they saw Moses."

Does Luke mean he aims to lead the Injuns out of the wilderness, or that he is just plumb glad to get out of them Flatbush bullrushes?

PHILADELPHIA—Frank Zaccaria, 178, Orange, N. J., knocked out Nick Rabin, 188, Bethlehem, Pa. (4).

Indians Trounced By Browns

CLEVELAND, April 29 (INS)—The St. Louis Browns swarmed over the Indians, 9 to 8, handing the Clevelanders their third straight defeat.

Johnny Beradino, the rookie St. Louis second baseman, was the hitting star of the contest, connecting for two doubles and a single which blasted in five runs. He put the Browns ahead to stay in the third frame when he doubled to clear the bases of three occupants.

The Indians used a quartet of second-string hurlers starting with Bill Zuber. Hal Trosky hit his first homer of the season in the fifth with Heath on base.

Goodman's Home Run Gives Reds Victory

CINCINNATI, April 29 (INS)—A home run by Ival Goodman with two on and none out in the ninth gave the Reds a 7 to 6 victory over the Chicago Cubs and catapulted Cincinnati into the leadership of the National League.

Jack Russell, successor to Clay Bryant on the hill, was relieved by Bill Lee after Werber and Frey singled in the Reds' last time at bat. But Goodman poled Lee's first pitch into the right field bleachers.

Helen Mara, Chaplin Freed by Court

NEW YORK, April 29 (AP)—The jury in the trial of the New York football Giants, Helen Mara, and Charles Chaplin, a clerk, on charges of violating the amusement and sports events tax law was discharged after it failed to reach an agreement.

Miss Mara is a niece of John and Tim Mara, sports promoters.

They were charged with responsibility for the sale of eight $2.20 (face value) tickets to the championship game between the Giants and Green Bay Packers last fall, at $3.45 each, without endorsing the price at which the tickets were sold or the name of the dealer and sales person.

3 Records Broken At Philly

PHILADELPHIA, April 29 (INS)—Overcoming the handicaps of a chilling wind, a winter temperature, rain and muddy track, athletes competing in the first day of the two-day Penn relays carnival at Franklin Field today broke one world record and two meet standards.

Four fleet youngsters representing Mercersburg Academy of Pennsylvania raced to a new universal standard in the quarter-mile relay prep school championship.

William Faymonville, Notre Dame, defending champion, shattered his own carnival record at the discus throw on taking that event with a throw of 163 feet 4 inches. His old figure, 157 feet 1½ inches was made last year.

FAST SCHOOL TEAM

Mercersburg Academy, in winning the prep school quarter-mile title for the 11th time, registered the fastest time ever negotiated by a schoolboy quartet. Jack Watt, Austin Kellam, Robert Ufer and Paxon Gifford were clocked in 42.2 seconds.

They bettered the world mark of 42.4 hung up by Glendale H. S. of California in 1928 and the carnival mark of 42.5 made by their own school in 1933.

Pittsburgh won the initial varsity championship, the quarter-mile test, defeating Cornell by two feet. Frank Ohl, Arthur Thomas, Albert Ferrera and Lawrence Tregoning, the Panther runner, were timed at 42.3, a tenth of a second slower than Mercersburg.

With the dazzling Rideout twins, Blaine and Wayne, running the third and anchor legs, North Texas Teachers' College retained its distance medley relay title in the rather torpid time of 10:11.5. D. Christman, ran the quarter, Harvey Bryant the half, Blaine the three-quarters and Wayne the mile.

WIN BY WIDE MARGIN

The Texans won by a third of a mile from Indiana. Michigan was third. William Watson, Michigan, accounted for an upset when he defeated Francis Ryan, Columbia, defending meet and indoor and outdoor intercollegiate titleholder, in the shotput with a toss of 52 feet 9¼ inches, a carnival record. Ryan set the former standard, 51 feet 6⅛ inches, last year. Ryan placed second at 50 feet 9⅛ inches.
